ANZ Head of Australian Economics, David Plank, commented:

Consumer confidence fell 1.3% for the last weekend of November compared to the prior weekend. News of Omicron likely impacted sentiment, with some new restrictions for international travellers being quickly imposed. Only 16.3% of respondents expect 'good times' for the economy over the next five years, the lowest since August 2020. Despite the overall dampened outlook, 'time to buy major household items' rose to its highest since early July 2021. As well, confidence in 'financial conditions' is holding up quite well. Weekly inflation expectations rose 0.2ppt to 4.8% but stayed below its recent high despite petrol prices surging 3.6% in the past two weeks.
